

ISRS experts take part in a master class on compiling the Bertelsmann Transformation Index

The national system for monitoring and evaluating Uzbekistan's positions in the international ratings and indices are supported by German experts.

German experts support the national system for monitoring and evaluating Uzbekistan's positions in the international ratings and indices.

ISRS experts has taken part in a master class on compiling the Bertelsmann Transformation Index, organized by the Ministry of Justice of the Republic of Uzbekistan together with the Bertelsmann Foundation.

At the webinar, specialists and experts from research institutions, ministries and agencies of Uzbekistan got acquainted with the methodology for formation of the Bertelsmann Transformation Index, developed in the early 2000s to assess the degree of development and management of the process of political and economic transformations in the world.

It was noted that the methods used by the Foundation for assessing the quality and differences of political governance, democratization and transformation of the world's economies serve as the basis for developing practical recommendations that allow not only to determine the directions of reforms in the economic and political development of each state, but also to improve methods of management, models of external support for the transformation process.

Experts of the Bertelsmann Foundation positively noted the significant transformations in macroeconomic policy and market institutional reforms in the banking sector, improvement of the investment climate and large-scale measures to support exports, development of construction sector and expressed their readiness to continue mutually beneficial cooperation on further indication of Uzbekistan in the Bertelsmann Index, taking into account the reforms under implementation in the country.

Source