

New building of Uzbekistan's Embassy opens in the capital of Kazakhstan

During the state visit of the President of Uzbekistan, a new building of the country's embassy was opened in the city of Nur-Sultan.

Presidents Shavkat Mirziyoyev and Kassym-Jomart Tokayev, having cut the symbolic ribbon, solemnly opened a new building of the diplomatic mission of Uzbekistan.

The national anthems of the two countries were played.

The presidents got acquainted with the conditions created at the Embassy.

The modern building was erected by the builders of Uzbekistan. The premises are decorated in the national style.

On the territory of the diplomatic mission, there are the main building, the consular department, a residential building for employees, the residence of the head of the diplomatic mission, a children's and sports grounds.

Modern conditions have been created in the meeting rooms and conference hall.

The main attention is paid to the effective organization of the work process. Information technologies are widely introduced. The interactive equipment here allows holding virtual talks. For effective consular activities, an electronic queue system has been installed. Visitors can receive the necessary information by interactive means.

The necessary conditions have been created for people with special needs.

Everything in the new building is focused on the quality and efficiency of work aimed at further enhancing the partnership with the brotherly country.

Shavkat Mirziyoyev and Kassym-Jomart Tokayev left a note in the Embassy's Book of Honorary Guests.

Source